NOTE

In the following Index the numbers do not refer to the pages but to the writs calendared. One dash at the beginning of an entry indicates that the name is the same as in the preceding entry; and a second dash, that the territorial designation is also the same. In the following pages a second dash also has been used to indicate the repetition of the same Christian name, while . . . represent a blank name. The figures in parentheses, thus (1649), after an entry in Index of Persons, mark the date at which the person is first named in the Calendar. As a rule no other dates are given, except occasionally that of decease or of a change of office or title. A query after the number of a writ, thus, 1470 (?), indicates that the person is probably, though not certainly, referred to in that writ. In the Index of Persons the names of abbots, commendators, etc., will be found under the name of their abbey or religious house, as well as under their own names, and the monks of any monastery are given under its name only, while vicars and parsons appear under their own names and the names of their respective parishes. The provosts and bailies also of any burgh or town, so far as named in the Calendar, will be found under the name of their burgh as well as under their separate surnames. The names both of persons and places are arranged, for the most part, under the modern form of spelling the word.
